When do people make small talk?

People make small talk because they want to be polite or when they are waiting for something. The most common time for small talk is the first time you see or meet someone. For example, you are at work and you see a co-worker when you are drinking tea in the coffee shop, you might say hello and talk about the sports or weather. The next time you see each other you might just smile and say nothing.

You should only start a conversation after someone smiles. Do not stop two people in order to talk about something unimportant such as the weather. If someone is reading a book or writing a letter at the bus stop it is not good to start a conversation. Another good time to make small talk is during a break in a meeting when nothing important happens. Finally, it is important to understand when the other person wants to stop the conversation.

1. Why do people use small talk?-----

2. Write some topics for small talk. -----

3. Is it good to stop two people in order to talk about something unimportant? -----

4. A good time to start a conversation is during a break in a meeting. (True/ False)

5. It is unimportant to understand when the other person wants to stop the conversation. (true/False)

6. Find a word in the first paragraph which means "a person who has a similar job to you".

Good Luck
